

Surfing

Surfing on the southern coast of Sri Lanka means uncrowded line-ups, consistent swells and pumping waves.

Best time? November to May though some spots start as early as the beginning of April.

Free surf or any number of surf schools for beginners through to wave acrobats, hiring surfboards if needed.

Clean waves hold to 6ft on a good day, classic A-frame with peeling left and right from reef break points. 45 metre rides!

We cater for all surfing abilities, from a 2km beginners stretch of shallow sandy beach to intermediate reefs in walking distance.

One of the best places in Sri Lanka to discover a connection with the ocean and catch your first wave.

Get there for first light and surf as the sun rises.

The bay is protected from the wind for a 400m ride on a slow, low power wave. Many lefts and rights appear at different tides with the best swell from the south west.

This can be easily surfed, holding up to 5ft. A big swell can be very entertaining to watch with boards flying everywhere. Fun!

More advanced surfers can find reefs close by.

30 minutes north in a tuk-tuk is a more exposed beach break with higher power, faster waves. It's super clean and a great place for beginners working towards intermediate level.

The surf schools have a wide range of foam, epoxy and fibreglass boards for hire. They have competition level riders and have grown up on the waves so have great experience. You will easily find a teacher that you feel comfortable with.
